Henry Bates, Ex-U.C. Athlete, Dies

SACRAMENTO — Funeral services were held today for Henry J. Bates, a local securities broker, who died Saturday. He was 71.

Mr. Bates was a University of California varsity football end during the pre-Wonder Team days.

His death came after a heart attack in his home at 2756 10th Avenue, Sacramento.

Mr. Bates was born and reared in Alameda where his parents lived most of their adult years. A lifelong football enthusiast — a brother says Mr. Bates never missed a U.C. home game. He received his first taste of varsity competition playing for Alameda High School before he entered the university in 1916.

As a lower classman, five foot-nine inch, 150 pound "Tiny" Bates became starting end for the famed Coach Andy Smith until his gridiron career was ended in a collision that broke several of his neck vertebrae during the 1918 Cal-University of Washington game.

Mr. Bates left school, where he had been an agriculture major, and moved to the Sacramento Valley where he became a rice buyer for Rosenberg Bros., the largest millers in the west. While at U.C. Mr. Bates had been affiliated with Beta Theta Pi fraternity, Skull and Keys, and the Winged Helmet Society.

He entered the securities investment business in 1929 with Bond, Goodwin and Tucker, which later became Tucker, Hunter, Dulin Co. In 1931 Mr. Bates became a founding partner in Ellworthy & Co. and was chairman of the board when Ellworthy merged with Stone & Webster Securities Corp. in December of 1966. He remained as resident manager of the Sacramento branch office until his death.

In addition to being a member of the Commonwealth Club of California for over 30 years and the Sierra Club, Mr. Bates was founder and first president of the California Grid Club, a member of the California Alumni Assn., the Big C Society, the University Club of Sacramento and the Grandfathers' Club of America.

Survivors include his widow, Martha, two sons, Richard, of Belvedere, and Robert, of Sacramento, a daughter, Mrs. Mary Helen McKinnis, of Sacramento, and four brothers, Marine Maj. Norman C. Bates (ret.) of Alameda; Lesley Rixon Bates, a retired Los Angeles City College educator living in that city; Rear Admiral Richard W. Bates, (USN ret.) of Newport, R.I., and Dr. Charles Edward H. Bates, a San Francisco physician.

Tunes-and-Talents To Benefit From Recital By One Of Its Own

By CLARA F. EMERSON

A talented young Newporter who received an early boost up the ladder of success in music from Newport's Own Tunes and Talents will give a benefit concert tomorrow night to help make similar opportunities available to other aspiring young musicians.

Sarah Pener, lyric soprano, who won the organization's summer camp scholarship award in 1960 and graduated last year from the Eastman School of Music, will appear at the Newport Performing Arts Center to swell the fund to send this year's scholarship winners to music camp.

The young singer, a popular performer since her high school years, was last heard here in a concert at Cranston - Calvert

School last August, when she delighted a capacity audience with a program showing that she had gone a long way toward fulfilling her early promise. She was acclaimed for beautiful tone production, fine interpretations and a queenly style presence.

Miss Pener, daughter of Mrs. Sarah M. Pener of 98 Kay St., is now studying voice in New York and is affiliated with the Metropolitan Opera Studio, after tryouts last summer with John Gutman, its director, during the Newport Opera Festival. She has won attention not only as a singer, but as a former Miss Newport and Miss Easton's Beach. She has also acted in the Newport Summer Playhouse and in summer theater in Warwick, Framingham, Mass., and Wallingford, Conn. She was on the young people's committee which helped to promote last summer's Opera Festival.

Her concert will support the 13th annual scholarship fund, to send winners of auditions on Sunday in voice, piano and instrumental categories to the Amherst Summer Music Center in Raymond, Maine.

Beginning in 1956 with a voice scholarship for Ernest Triplett, baritone, now a successful artist in concert and opera, the Newport's Own Tunes and Talents has financed special training for 22 young scholarship winners. A number of them are now pursuing musical careers. George Wilson, piano winner in 1960, graduates this year from the Eastman School of Music. Karen Dwyer is in this year's graduating class of the Hartt Music School in Hartford, Conn., where Richard Munro, voice winner in 1962, is a student. Wayne Ward, piano winner in 1963 is studying at Tufts University.

Two former winners, Mark Silechnik, flutist, 1965, and Wendy McAskill, pianist, 1967, will return to the Amherst center for four-week courses this summer without scholarship aid.

Thus the record indicates both that Newport is fostering the development of musical talent among its young people, and that Newport's own Tunes and Talents has made perceptive chances in awarding its scholarships.

Miss Pener's program will open with the Handel air, "Let the Bright Seraphim," from "Samson." She will sing groups of songs in German, French, and English, and a Puccini aria.

In the German group, songs by Brahms will be "Verge bliches Standchen," "Dien Blaues Auge," "Nachtigall," "Feldesamkeit," and "Der Schmeid."

Dehussey songs making up the French group will be "Beau Soir," "Il Pleure Dans mon Coeur," "La Chevelure," and "Mandoline."

From Puccini's "La Boheme" will be the aria "Addio," in Italian.

The closing group of English songs will consist of "In the Silence of the Night," by Rachmaninoff, "A Memory," by Rudolph Ganz, "Silent Noon," by Vaughn Williams, "And This is my Beloved" from "Kismet" by Wright and Forrest, and "You'll Never Walk Alone" from "Carousel" by Rodgers and Hammerstein.

The concert is set for 8:30 p.m.

Sarah Pender Performs Benefit For Tunes-Talents Scholarship

By ELLEN NASON

Newport's Own Tunes and Talents presented Miss Sarah Pender, lyric soprano in concert Saturday evening at the Newport Performing Arts Center for the benefit of the Music Scholarship Awards Fund.

The event was a dual triumph for artist and sponsor. Miss Pender, a former Tunes and Talents winner, received many congratulations for her performance. Her voice displayed a velvet quality and a pleasing fluidity, while her renditions were given with the finesse of a mature artist. She reflected great credit on her alma mater, the Eastman School of Music. At present she is a student of Raymond L. McDermott of New York. She is also a member of the Metropolitan Opera Studio's travelling group.

Her program was traditional in content. Handel's Aria "Let the Bright Seraphim" from Samson served as a brilliant introduction, although one wished for clearer diction. Happily this was effected in the concluding group of songs in English.

She chose Brahms for her romantic composer. The quartet of Lied pieces was a kaleidoscope of mood pictures ranging from "Vergebliches Standchen," a flirtatious, futile serenade to the rollicking "Der Schmied," The Blacksmith.

The singer has a definite affinity for the poetic music of Debussy. In "Beau Soir" an exquisite pianissimo tone was spun while pathos and dramatic feeling were characteristic of "Il pleure Dans Mon Coeur" and "La Chevelure."

"Mimi's Addio" from Puccini's "La Boheme" was a tribute to the opera category and afforded the use of the singer's upper register. An unfamiliar song in English, "A Memory" by Rudolph Ganz was most musical in the use of dynamics. Gershwin's "Summertime" was a lovely encore to round out a very fine performance.

Mrs. Marian Van Slyke supported the singer with discerning piano accompaniments particularly in the Debussy group.

Newport's own Tunes and Talents, Inc. will be able to send new audition winners for summer music study at Amherst Music-Camp-in-Maine because of the financial success of last evening's concert.

Mrs. Samuel Adelson was chairman for the event. Other committee members were Mrs. Theodore P. Grosvenor, honorary chairman; Mrs. Armand Napoli, president; Mrs. Frank Peckham, secretary; Mr. King Covell, treasurer; Admiral Richard W. Bates, publicity; Mrs. William Desotneck, historian; Mrs. Samuel Adelson, Miss Emma Beldan, Miss Rosamunde Hendel, Mrs. C. B. McCaffree, Miss Ellen Nason, Mr. Carl Thorpe, Miss Sadie Taber, Mrs. E. S. R. Brandt, Mrs. Leonard Scalzi, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sorenson, Mrs. Harold W. VanSlyke and Mrs. Robert F. Gunning.

War College Foundation

Establishment of the Naval War College Foundation to provide funds for the further developments of the institution's educational resources and for the beautification of its strikingly located structures will, we feel, be acclaimed by the entire community. Supporters and friends who took the initiative in getting a state charter for the foundation deserve the thanks of all of us in this area and many more throughout the country who are aware of the significance of the college, the oldest establishment of its kind in the world.

It seems especially appropriate that the Foundation's formation comes only a few months after the War College observed its 85th anniversary. At this time, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chief of naval operations, pointed out that the college pioneered in the development of the science of naval warfare, served as a fountainhead for new ideas and thinking, and will provide the next generation of leadership essential to our national security.

The non-profit, self-supporting foundation will receive gifts of intangible personal property from private donors and make the necessary arrangements to channel them to the college through the secretary of the Navy. Funds will be used for improvement programs for which no federal appropriations are available. Besides, the foundation will welcome gifts of memorabilia, artifacts, memoirs and other archival resources from both military and civilian persons who have been instrumental in the development of naval strategy. Thus the college can become increasingly a repository for important documentary and other data and a center of world interest for researchers and scholars in the naval field.

Newporters are aware of the importance of the Naval War College. It makes us a place of great interest when it brings here such events as the annual Global Strategy Conference, the recent assembly of high-ranking naval personnel from some 40 countries of the free world, and also, in its lectures, authoritative spokesmen from many areas of national and international interest. From the days of its first president, Adm. Stephen B. Luce in 1884, down to the regime of its present head, Vice Adm. Richard B. Colbert, it has constantly expanded the activities and through the foundation should be able to forge ahead to ever greater heights.

Among the foundation trustees who have worked for this important forward step are Richard B. Sheffield of this city; Winthrop W. Aldrich of Providence, former ambassador to the Court of St. James; John Nicholas Brown's former assistant secretary of the Navy for air; Robert Leeson of Warwick and Rear Adm. Richard W. Bates, USN (ret.) of Newport. Applause is due them for their great help.

We feel that at no time in our history has the War College been of greater importance than it is today when our sea dominance is threatened by the Soviet Union. We are sure that patriotic Americans will rally to the support of a Navy establishment that has served us faithfully and with distinction in the past and stands ready to make even greater contributions in the future. With the cooperation of all of us this can be accomplished.

can gun system. Officials say the deployment of the new artillery battalions to USAREUR is "the latest example in the continuing program to provide U. S. Army forces committed to NATO with the latest and most modern weapons necessary to counter any threat to the NATO countries."

Chaparral/Vulcan battalions are organized and equipped to provide air defense of forward combat areas and other critical areas. The Vulcan and Chaparral will supplement the capabilities of radar-directed air defense systems currently deployed in Europe.

The Vulcan gun is a six-barreled, automatic, 20mm Army adaptation of the historic Gatling gun. It is mounted on a tracked vehicle, which makes it a highly mobile and flexible weapons system.

The Chaparral surface-to-air missile also is vehicular mounted. Both weapons can be transported by air.

WEAPONS

USSR Presents R&D Challenge

THE USSR has stepped up its military R&D efforts to such an extent that it now may be "only a matter of time" before the Soviets pass the U. S. in not only the level of research activities, but in technology as well.

Such is the dire forecast from Dr. John S. Foster, jr, DoD Director of R&E, who testified recently before the House Advanced Research and Technology Subcommittee. There is still time, however, for the U. S. to take "positive action" to keep its current technology lead, Dr. Foster said. He made it clear positive action means the U. S. should spend more R&D money.

Annual R&D spending by the USSR, Dr. Foster disclosed, has risen from $2-billion in FY 55 to $16-billion in FY 70. U. S. funding during the same period, he noted, has risen from $3-billion to only $14-billion (DoD FY 70 request).

"A vigorous Soviet effort has paid off for the Kremlin in the form of impressive new military aircraft," Dr. Foster observed. He did not specify what aircraft he had in mind, but, among the major aircraft programs the Soviets have been working on in recent years (JOURNAL 22 November) are:

- SWING-WING FITTER B—an experimental version of the Mach 2 fixed-wing SU-7 fighter-bomber.
- FIDDLER—an all-weather fighter-interceptor—possibly the most important Soviet warplane to date, in the opinion of some observers.
- FLAGON B (SU-11)—a STOL interceptor.

Support From Seamans

Backing up Dr. Foster's warnings is AF Secretary Robert C. Seamans, jr, who said in recently-released testimony before the House Defense Appropriations Subcommittee: "The array of new (Soviet aircraft) developments is impressive and indicative of an aggressive R&D program." Seamans said the Soviets have displayed at least nine new fighter aircraft for the 1970's, ranging from STOL craft to a high-speed high-altitude fighter.

"Their (the Soviets') ability to produce modern aircraft," Secretary Seamans said, "is amply demonstrated by the MIG-21, which rivals the best U. S. fighter and is already deployed in the active forces of 19 nations, in addition to the USSR."

Balance of Trade

In his testimony Dr. Foster emphasized that a strong aerospace industry not only helps keep U. S. aircraft competitive with Russian aircraft, but also helps the U. S. maintain a healthy balance of payments: "Since aerospace industry exports of $3.29-billion provide almost 10% of total U. S. exports," he said, "the necessity for maintaining the present health and importance of the aerospace industry is evident."

A major but less visible benefit of military aircraft R&D is the "spin-off to the civil sector," Dr. Foster said.

"In years past," he noted, "civil aviation was able to use the aircraft as developed for military needs. The relation today is somewhat different. Instead of entire aircraft making the transfer, various components, sub-systems, structures and techniques are spun off." Thus although total benefits from military aircraft R&D are greater today than in the past, they are not as easily identified, he said.

Dr. Foster also contended that the Vietnam war has demonstrated that aviation can and will assume a greatly broadened share of the logistics burden.

He predicted: "Historians may well conclude the tide of defeat was turned in 1965 by the timely arrival in Southeast Asia of American airlift, tactical air, and new technology."

GAO Raps ABM

THE GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE has served notice it is going to take a more detailed look at cost estimates in the Safeguard ABM program.

In a sharply-critical report on the Nike-X, the ABM system which evolved from the Nike-Zeus (started in 1963), GAO charged that cost estimates were "not fully documented in relation to the work to be done. . . .

"During our continuing review of the Safeguard program," GAO said, "we plan to examine, in greater depth, the support for and acceptability of cost estimates."

GAO conceded that "the forecasting of costs for a new and complex weapon system is beset with numerous uncertainties during the early phases of development," but pointed out that Nike-X estimates for a one-year period "reflected the amount of funds available, rather than a cost estimate for the current work to be performed."

GAO said the fact that new defense programs often are full of uncertainties in early phases of development should not deter the writing of a "reasonably complete" description of tasks to be accomplished during a one-year contract term.

In June 1964 Bell Telephone Labs priced Nike-X work to be done at Western Electric's North Carolina plant at $40.7-million. GAO noted that Western Electric's estimates for many of the tasks were the same as Bell Labs' budgetary estimate.

Not Supported

"We found a number of instances," said the GAO report, "where, in our opinion, the estimates were not adequately supported in relation to the actual tasks accomplished."

GAO said the Army had also complained about difficulty in getting Bell Labs to adequately define the work to be placed with Western Electric.

Western Electric argued, according to GAO, that its cost estimates were documented "as fully as the nature of the tasks permitted."

"Estimates of tasks which were novel and uncertain necessarily rested on engineering judgment," the report said.

The GAO survey covered the period prior to the September 1967 decision to deploy the Sentinel ABM system, a limited version of Nike-X. The Sentinel has been modified and was redesignated Safeguard last March. Name changes, however, did not alter the basic system management policies, GAO said.

Summarizing its conclusions, GAO said it would urge that contractors in the future be required to base their proposals on current work—and to identify uncertainties ahead of time.

SPOTLIGHT ON PEOPLE

Making News...

Col John Glenn, jr, USMC-Ret, has announced his intention to seek the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator from Ohio. Glenn—who in 1962 became the first U.S. astronaut to orbit the earth—will seek the Senate seat being vacated throughout the retirement of Senate Armed Services Committee member Stephen Young.

Admiral Willard J. Smith, Coast Guard Commandant; LGen Earl Hedlund, Director Defense Supply Agency; and James McCollom, NASA Director of Transportation and Logistics, have accepted invitations from the National Defense Transportation Association to become National Vice Presidents for USCG, DSA, and NASA.

RAdm Richard W. Bates, USN-Ret, and John Nicholas Brown, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, are among the trustees of the Naval War College Foundation. The charitable organization was founded to support NWC programs.

Mrs. Ann Crawford, wife of a lieutenant colonel assigned to the Pentagon, has come to the aid of the reassigned military family. Her new monthly magazine ("Military Living and Consumer Guide") offers useful information on rules and customs peculiar to installations in the Washington, D.C. area. She is considering franchising local editions in other areas across the country. (For information about the magazine write P.O. Drawer P, Bowie, Md. 20715).

Taking Honors...

William M. Allen, Chairman of the Board, The Boeing Co., has been named by the National Aeronautic Association to receive its 1969 Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy.

Lt Paul H. Dallman, University of Montana, heads the list of the Army's first ROTC Leadership Citation recipients. Other winners are Julian O. Smith, University of Richmond; Ira H. Rapp, III, the Citadel; Elvin E. Cowan, jr, University of Texas; and Fred C. Wellhausen, University of Montana. ROTC Leadership Citations will be given annually to honor graduates of each of the Army's advanced summer camps.

Going Places...

Capt James A. Lovell, USN, LCdr Thomas K. Mattingly, II, USN, and Fred W. Haise, jr, will really be going places come 12 March, when the threesome is scheduled to blast off for man's third moon landing. Captain Lovell—who has chalked up more time in space than any other astronaut—will command the Apollo 13 spacecraft. Commander Mattingly will pilot the command module, and Mr. Haise will pilot the lunar module.

Townsend Hoopes, former Under Secretary of the Air Force and author of The Limits of Intervention (see JOURNAL 20 September), has become Vice President and Washington Director of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., international management consultants. Mr. Hoopes previously served with that company from 1958 to 1964.

Capt Fred Fearnow, USN-Ret, former Chief of Navy Air Control and Identification Systems, and John Loeb, who was his civilian deputy in that office, have formed the ACLS (Aircraft Carrier Landing Systems) Corporation in Chevy Chase, Md. They will serve as consultants to government and industry in the fields of (naturally) aircraft carrier landing systems, air navigation, and air traffic control.

Robert A. Fisette has been named President of the new LTV Jet Fleet Corp., Dallas, Tex.

George M. Low has been sworn in as Deputy Administrator, National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Speaking Up...

J.E. Franklin, Vice President of Advanced Programs for North American Rockwell Corporation's Space Division, Downey, Calif., defends military R&D spending: "The very military and space research and development programs so often criticized by those eager to press for the solution of urban or social ills have created the best organization, managerial and technical tools we have for the survival and improvement of our way of life and civilization."

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew also has his say about a critic of DoD R&D spending—Senator William Proxmire (D-Wis): "We're a little worried about him. We think he is suffering from a military-industrial complex."

Admiral I.J. Galantin, Chief of Naval Material, addressing the Purchasing Management Association of Houston on the same subject—the m/i complex—makes a good point: "It has been said that the body of total knowledge is doubling every 10-15 years. It has also been estimated that the half-life of technical knowledge is today only 10 years—half of what we knew 10 years ago does not apply today—half of what we must know 10 years from now does not yet exist. It is more difficult today than ever before—that we stay on the leading edge of Progress."

In Command...

Col Robert P. Campbell has taken command of the Army Combat Developments Command Medical Service Agency, Ft Sam Houston, Tex.

Cdr Richard A. Martini has become CO, Patrol Squadron 24, NAS Patuxent River, Md.

Col William L. Brinson is the New Commandant Air University's Academic Instructor and Allied Officer School, Maxwell AFB, Ala. In his new post he also serves as Air University's Foreign Training Officer.

Col Robert C. Hixon has assumed command of the Army's XXIV Corps Artillery, Phu Bai, Vietnam.

LCol Billy J. McNair has been named Commander of the 53rd Tactical Fighter Squadron, Bitburg AF, Germany.

Col Kenneth J. Green has taken new duties as Commander, 340th Bombardment Group, Carswell AFB, Tex.

Sacramento's Debutantes

Fifteen girls from Sacramento and surrounding areas have been named as Sacramento's debutantes for this year. The girls met for the first time at a mother-daughter tea held on the first day of summer, Wednesday afternoon in the Carmichael home of Mrs. Wyman G. Smith Jr. Members of the Debutante Sponsor Committee served as hostesses and a few debs from previous years were on hand to greet the new debutantes and help them get acquainted.

The girls will be presented at a formal ball Dec. 27 in the Woodlake Inn, with proceeds benefiting the Sacramento Symphony.

The girls will meet at parties during the summer and get to know one another before departing for their first year of college. They will again be honored at a round of parties during the holiday season just preceding their presentation.

This year's debs, their parents and high schools are: Adrienne Affleck, a graduate of Encina High School and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James A. Affleck of Sacramento; Jocelyn Bates, Sacramento High School graduate, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bates; Sue Bowker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bowker, a graduate of EHS; Chris Carnie, a graduate of Rio Americano High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Carnie Jr.; Cathy Cook, also a graduate of EHS, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Orrin S. Cook; Claudia Flournoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren J. Flournoy of Likely, Modoc County, and a graduate of Modoc High School; Clare Gaines, graduate of EHS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Gaines; Susan Gordon, a graduate of Dominican School for Girls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Gordon Jr. of Rio Vista; Deborah Ann Harding, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William F. B. Harding, and Cindy Mark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil J. Mark, both graduates of RAHS; Diane Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dusty C. Miller, a graduate of Encina High School; Jeanne Needham of Davis High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Needham of Davis; Rebecca Smiley, a graduate of El Camino High School, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley J. Smiley of Carmichael; Joyce Spilman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Spilman of El Macero, a graduate of DHS, and Sue Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram C. Wheeler of Courtland, a graduate of Delta High School.

Admiral Bates dies at 81; won wartime decorations

Rear Adm. Richard Waller Bates, USN (ret.), 81, of 12 Mt. Vernon St., recipient of the Navy Cross and three Legion of Merit awards and a staff member of the Naval War College here for a number of years, died this morning in the Naval Hospital after a long illness.

Adm. Bates attended the War College as a student in 1940, and remained there as a staff member until 1943. In 1946 he returned to the staff and served there until 1958, except for a two-month retirement in 1949. He retired in 1958, but remained in close touch with the War College, as a consultant and lecturer. In July, 1972, he was elected president of the Naval War College Foundation, an office he held at the time of his death.

He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1915, took a Naval Academy postgraduate course in 1921, earned a master's degree from Columbia University in 1922, and a doctorate from Long Island University in 1958.

He commanded the destroyer Buchanan in 1932-33, and served as temporary commanding officer of the oil tanker Ramapo in 1933. He commanded the destroyer Clark from 1938 to 1940. Upon leaving the War College in 1943, he assumed command of the heavy cruiser Minneapolis. While serving in the Pacific Theater in 1944, he was awarded the first of three Legions of Merit.

While serving as chief of staff of the bombardment, fire support and associated groups of the 3rd Fleet, he was awarded the Navy Cross. In 1945, as chief of staff and aide to Commander, Battleship Squadron 1, he was awarded a second Legion of Merit for strategic and tactical assistance leading to the capture of Lingayen Gulf and the landing on Luzon in the Philippines. Later that year, he received a third Legion of Merit for his part in operations leading to the capture of Okinawa.

He was a member of Trinity Church here. He was president of the Clambake Club of Newport, and a member of the Ida Lewis Yacht Club and the Newport Reading Room. He also was a member of the New York Yacht Club of New York City, the Army-Navy Club of Manila in The Philippines, and the Bohemian Club of San Francisco.

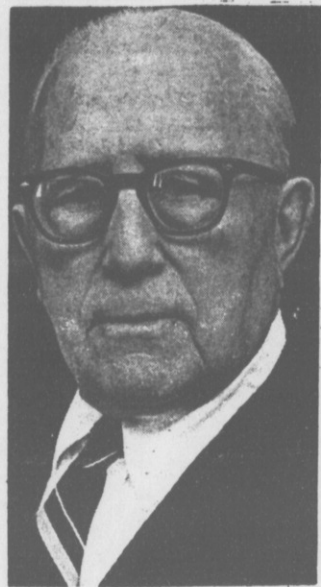

Adm. Bates was born in San Francisco Jan. 16, 1892, a son of Henry Lesley Alexander and Rebecca Helen Rixon Bates. He leaves three brothers, Dr. Charles E.H. Bates of San Francisco, Maj. Norman C. Bates USMC (ret.), of Alameda Calif., and Leslie R. Bates of Los Angeles; several nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements from the Hambly Funeral Home are incomplete.
